In the last Electoral College, which had 401 votes, the Republicans had 233 and the Demo crats 168. If the Republicans do only as well this year as they did in 1888 they will have enough votes to elect and 10 to spare. But the states which are counted as sure Republican give them but 157, and in order to elect they must get 66 of the 134 votes of the states which are counted as doubtful, they being Connecticut, Indiana, Iowa, Massa chusetts, Michigan, Montana, New Hamp shire, New Jersey, New York, West Vir ginia and Wisconsin. But Iowa, Massa chusetts, Michigan, New Hampshire and Wisconsin are likely to go Republican, and they will give 58 of the 66 required. and with Connecticut and West Virginia, or Indiana, or New York, the party will be all right.
